Risk overview

The INFORM index measures Syria's risk of crisis at 6.9, one of the highest in the world. Conflict has killed over 324,000 people and caused massive displacement across Syria. Syria's insecurity situation is impacting almost every part of the country. You can find INFORM's profile here.

Key updates

- Despite a ceasefire agreed upon on July 9th, 2017 in Southern Syria and a general decrease in violence, many armed groups are not a part of the agreement and fighting continues.
- Humanitarian access continues to be stalled by instability and fighting in most of Syria, with almost 5 million in hard to access areas. Constant shifting of frontlines of fighting make logistics unpredictable and difficult.
- Groups often deny certain goods from being transported, such as medicine.
- The crackdown on NGOs in Turkey has made cross-border activities into Northern Syria difficult.
- Close to half a million returnees came back to Syria in the first half of 2017 alone. Organizations need to prepare for returnees, as they face multi-sectoral problems not previously assessed.
